 LES PRÉLUDES. (Lamartine's Poetic Meditations.)

What is our life but a succession of Préludes to that unknown song whose first solemn tone is sounded by death? Love is the brilliant dawn of the young heart; but in whose life is not this first bliss broken by the howling storm which dispels the sweet illusion with its rough blast and destroys the holy altar of pure love? What soul, wounded in its innermost, does not, after such fierce ragings of the storm, seek seclusion and quiet to pacify its throbbings? And yet man does not long endure such life; but when the trumpet sounds, wherever the call may be, hurries to the battle, seeking the thickest of the fight to feel himself once more a man in all his strength and glory.

* 1) The stepsisters quarrel with Cinderella and maltreat her, she imploring them to be friendly and kind to her. 2) Cinderella, feeling that she is left without a friend in the world, cries and bewails her fate bitterly, sitting at her favorite place, the fireside in the kitchen. 3) The stepsisters receive an invitation, and go to the grand State Dress Ball, leaving Cinderella at home to attend to the work. 4) Cinderella, after finishing her work, falls asleep in a corner of the kitchen and dreams. 5) Her god-mother, a good fairy, appears in her dream and promises her that she shall go to the Ball also. The fairy makes a coach of a pumpkin, also horses and a coachman and footman; changes her shabby dress into a beautiful one, and giving her a pair of magnificent slippers of spun glass, sends her to the Ball, looking the image of a Princess. 6) On her arrival, the Prince invites her to dance, and opens the Grand Polonaise with her. He falls deeply in love, while all present, including her quarrelsome sisters, who do not recognize her, pay her homage. 7) Having promised her fairy god-mother to return at twelve o'clock precisely, she starts as she hears the clock strike, and hurriedly leaves the Ball, losing one of her slippers as she flies, followed by the Prince, who loses sight of her, but finds the slipper. 8) Cinderella hastens home to find herself in her old misery again. 9) The Prince having vowed that the beautiful girl should be his bride, searches for her, finds her by means of the slipper, and asks her to be his wife. 10) Grand bridal procession and wedding ceremony.

HOW HE GOT IT.

An English paper speaks of Gladstone's imposing brow. Just now Gladstone's brow reminds us of the protuberant forehead of Mrs. Yerger's baby.

"Does he get it from his father?" asked a visitor.

"No," replied Mrs. Yerger, "he gets it from falling down stairs."

Perhaps Gladstone gets his protuberant forehead from his recent fall.—[Texas Siftings.

Thousands of lovers of good dinners and late suppers have for years found the choicest and rarest of dishes on the tables of the Park House in Montgomery place, or, rather, Bosworth street. William D.
 Park is the oldest landlord in active service in the city, having entered the business April 1, 1855. His original establishment in 1842 was on the site of the present post office. He afterward removed to Morton place, and the latter to Central court. In 1874 he established the Park House on the premises he now occupies. About the time Bosworth street was opened, which comprises what were so long known as Montgomery place and Chapman place, Mr. Park secured on a long lease the estates formerly known as Nos. 4, 5 and 6 Montgomery place and Chapman place, of which No. 6 has been entirely rebuilt.

The specialties of the cuisine of this house have made it famous among bon vivants all over the country. Scores of New Yorkers always go to Park's for a rarebit and musty ale when they visit Boston, and his larder is always supplied with every kind of game. — [Boston Globe.
